

Ethnicity

In addition to experiencing daily microaggressions, people from minority ethnic groups, such as Black and Asian backgrounds, face various structural and societal barriers, including access to quality education, housing and healthcare

We found that Black and Asian youths who went to a university that would have normally required higher grades reported better life satisfaction than those who went to other alternative universities

University

Life satisfaction

This is possibly because they feel they have now 'made it' and overcome some of the structural barriers they faced
