

High income deprivation

Young people from areas that have experienced more income deprivation are faced with unequal access to quality education and are often the first in their family to attend university

Interestingly, we found that young people from these deprived areas felt less satisfied with life if they were at university and even more so if they were at a more academically selective university

We also found that these same young people from deprived areas who were at university were less likely to say they had close friends

Perhaps some individuals from deprived areas feel as if they do not fit in at some universities and have less access to their social networks, which may cause these feelings of life dissatisfaction
